STATE OF WAR DECREED BY GERMAN EMPEROR

This is Not a Declaration of War Against Any Nation, but a Preliminary to Calling Out the Whole Military Strength of the Empire.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Berlin, July 31.—Emperor William of Germany today decreed a state of war.

The following official announcement was issued:

"In conformity with paragraph 68, of the constitution of the German Empire, Bavaria being excluded, the German Emperor has decreed a state of war. A similar decree for Bavaria will be issued."

The emperor's decree means the immediate mobilization of Germany's army of 5,200,000 men, and their movement to the frontiers of the empire. The decree was issued after Russia had failed to give a satisfactory explanation of her "partial mobilization."

Article 68 of the German constitution under which the decree was issued provides:

"When public safety in the Federal territory is menaced the emperor may decree any part of it to be in a state of war."

The decree also means that a state of martial law prevails throughout the empire.

The railroads of the entire country have been taken over by the military forces. Troops are being sent in force to the Russian and French borders. Germany expects her mobilization to be followed with similar action by both these countries.

Wilhelm forces of all these nations were footing a general mobilization which is practically certain. Hopes of localizing the Russo-Servian war have been given up. The Russian ukase calling out more than 1,000,000 reserves increased the strain of the situation so tense that it could bear nothing more, and when St. Petersburg failed to give a satisfactory explanation the Kaiser and his advisers decided that the Imperial decree would have to be issued.

Before the decree was issued the red cards that tell all those subject to military call that a state of war prevails and calls upon the Kaiser's subject to rally to the colors, had been sent to every town in the Empire. All preparations for mobilization had been made before the meeting of the Imperial council at Potsdam last night. There the Imperial decree was drawn up and it was signed by the Kaiser today.

The mobilization orders sent to each district of Germany provided that all subject to military service should report. These include all men who belong to the present military establishment, those whose terms of service have been included in the period between 1903 and the present, and such recruits as reported at the last drawing and were excused.

Though denying that the Kaiser's decree meant war with Russia, government officials admitted that the situation was most grave.

When asked if it indicated that a declaration of war against Russia might be expected, one attaché of the foreign office said:

"War is inconceivable. Russia's partial mobilization meant that similar steps should be taken by Germany for defense. Something may be done to avert the worst, but the danger is acute."

Great crowds are parading the streets this afternoon cheering the Kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The entire populace has been aroused to a high pitch of enthusiastic patriotism.

The Socialists still maintain their protests against war. The editor of the Daily Vorwaerts, today sent an appeal to the Kaiser to consent to a mediation conference. The paper says in an editorial:

"The Vorwaerts recognizes the Kaiser's sincere endeavors to work in the interest of peace. In the present struggle neither the honor nor the welfare of the Fatherland is at stake; it is a mad adventure."

Announcement as to when the official order for mobilization would be issued, was withheld when efforts were made to secure information at the war office. It was the general impression, however, that the proclamation would soon follow that decreeing a state of war.

DELIGHTED CROWD AT ELKS HOME

The large hall on the second story of the Elks Home was crowded to the doors Thursday evening to witness one of the best entertainments that has ever been given before the Elks and to enjoy the dance that followed the entertainment. The program began promptly at 8:30 when the large orchestra that had been secured broke the silence with a rousing march which was followed by a one-step.

Tom Linton and Net Nester made a big hit when as supposed strangers they met at the platform, became acquainted, and relieved their happy feelings by singing an especially good and snappy march song. Linton then sang, much to the delight of the audience, "I'm Going Back Home," which was followed by a deep bass solo by Nester, which was greatly appreciated. She followed this by a clever yodeling refrain, which made many think that they were far away in the mountains of Switzerland. The Lintons' last number was entitled "Mary Ann," the theme of which was that no one knew what time it was when the hands were off the clock.

Harry Linton, who is well known in this city and a Brother Elks, officiated at the piano. Mrs. Harry Linton was the next to appear and did some clever singing and dancing. Her big hit was made when she began to jolly the piano player, Harry Linton, and when she finally announced that she would sing a little pathetic ballad entitled, "I'm going to the piano."

Accompanied by a piano, she appeared, garbed in kaaki uniform and made, even the experienced actors, take notice. Little Jack probably not over ten years of age.

The Musical Fredericks, who were indeed very musical, entertained the crowd with a number of musical selections played on nearly every known instrument from a saxophone to a tomato can. Many imitations of birds, steam engines, men coming home late at night, feeling exceptionally happy, and even of Teddy Roosevelt.

The smallest Elks in the world, three in number, were ushered to the platform to the tune of "And Lang Syne," and were saluted and cheered as they came up the center aisle. They are known as the Piccolo Midgets, and have a summer home at Phoenixia. They are brothers and members of the Kingston Elks.

Their first number was a Salvation Army scene, two of them dressed as members of the Salvation Army and the third as a Irish hood carrier, as appears in the Sunday comic section. Their next number was the displaying of great strength for little men and the famous prize fight. The two smallest ones were dressed in bright red tights and the third acted as the referee. At the end of the third round one of the fighters took the count, the referee drank the fluid in the pistol that was meant for the fighters, and the entertainment ended.

At the close of the vaudeville, the chairs were cleared away and dancing followed, the music being furnished by Prof. Muller's Elk band.

During the evening refreshments were served.

Only a Little Flash.

A great deal of excitement was caused Thursday afternoon about 4:30 near the corner of Wall and John streets when a fire alarm was rung in from box No. 93. The fire companies all responded and when they arrived they found that the auto delivery truck of Forsyth & Davis had caught fire as the driver was cranking the machine.

The gas in the tube leading from the tank to the carburetor caught fire but was put out before it reached the tank, by fire extinguishers. The car was pushed out of the alley where it caught fire into John street near Mayor Canfield's office. No damage was done, except that the insulation was burned off the wires.

She's on Her Way.

Mrs. Mary Barth of upper Broadway appeared before Recorder Grogan and told him that she had made arrangements to get out of town. She was told that if she was not out of town by one o'clock this afternoon she would be arrested and tried on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. Mrs. Barth is the woman who was accused by Charley Fisher, the downtown truckman, of stealing his roll of $30 last Saturday night while he was a visitor at her home, and who was discharged for lack of evidence. Mrs. Barth said that she was not positive as to whether she would go to Poughkeepsie or New York city.

RUN STARTED ON BANK OF ENGLAND

By Telegram to The Freeman.

London, July 31.—The financial terror wrought by the European crisis was strongly evidenced today when a run was started on the Bank of England by note holders. A long line of persons seeking cash for paper was outside the famous institution this afternoon.

Several joint stock banks were also heavily drawn upon. They paid out partly in gold and partly in notes.

The bank rate was raised to eight per cent this afternoon.

GERMAN LINERS HELD IN PORTS HERE

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—Officials of the Hamburg-American line announced today that the liner Vaterland would not sail from New York Saturday and that the liner Amerika would not leave Boston tomorrow. Their sailing time was postponed because of the European crisis.

Boston, July 31.—The Hamburg-American line today cancelled all sailings from Boston. Scheduled passenger sailings in the near future were the Amerika, tomorrow morning and the Cincinnati on August 15. It is supposed the ships will be used to transport reservists to Germany and there will be prepared for transport or cruiser work with light armament.

IMPERATOR HELD IN GERMAN PORT

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Hamburg, Ger., July 31.—The great Hamburg-American liner Imperator was withdrawn from trans-Atlantic service today. It is very likely that in case of a general war in Europe the giant liner will be pressed into the German government service.

The Imperator was due to sail from here tomorrow. It had a cash list that included hundreds of Americans who are homeward bound. It now will be necessary for these Americans to take passage either on one of the slower Hamburg-American boats or to take a long and roundabout route to reach the American and French lines.

The withdrawal announcement was made, it was stated, because officials felt it safer to keep the liner in the harbor than to risk it to the possibility of capture by some of the great powers.

Thousands of Americans who had planned extensive trips through Europe this summer, have cancelled their itineraries and have engaged passage for the United States. The requests for accommodations have flooded the steamship companies.

Mobilization of troops will also disorganize the entire German railway system.

WHEAT PRICES LOWER AT OPENING

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Chicago, July 31.—The Chicago Board of Trade opened as usual today and contrary to expectations, wheat opened lower. Excitement was intense.

September wheat, which closed yesterday at 94½, opened today at 92 to 91, while December opened from 1 to 2½ under yesterday's close.

May wheat, which closed at 102½ yesterday, opened at par.

Local wheat traders today awaited the opening of the Board of Trade with apprehension. Panicky scenes even surpassing in excitement those of the past two days were expected.

This being settling day for July, a mad scramble on the part of the shorts to cover on large quantities of wheat was expected. With the traders already laboring under high tension due to the sensational market caused by the Austro-Servian war and the prospects of other nations becoming involved, none would predict just what might happen to prices.

When trading began, interest centered chiefly in July wheat and oats. There were less than 800,000 bushels of contract wheat in public warehouses and only about 900,000 bushels of oats. Owing to the immense movement of wheat through this market, this supply was regarded as being unusually light.

The Armour house was told to be long on July wheat while the short interests were scattered. It was also said the Armour house was short on oats. The oats situation during the past few days has been complicated by the increase in prices in wheat and corn.

The galleries were jammed when the Board of Trade opened and on LaSalle street, outside the Board's building, several thousand waited to hear "what was doing."

The wheat market grew weaker as the morning progressed and at 10:15 was off almost ten cents from yesterday's high point.

STOCK EXCHANGES CLOSED ALL OVER THE WORLD

New York Exchange the Last Important One to Close and its Example Followed All Over the Country by Smaller Exchanges.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

New York, July 31.—After bearing the real burden of the world's markets and standing firm for a week while the institutions of Europe were tottering or falling, the New York Stock Exchange was closed today.

This action was taken by the board of governors after a meeting of leading financiers was held at the office of J. P. Morgan. The decision of this meeting that the European situation was too dangerous to permit of trading here, was immediately transmitted to the board of governors, who acted promptly.

Secretary Ely of the exchange gave out the following statement:

"The governing committee decided that the exchange be closed until further notice and that all dealing be suspended until further notice."

The governing committee of the exchange appointed a committee of five to settle any difficulties that may arise out of the closing of the market. It is probable that the question of margins and deliveries will arise. The committee is composed of H. G. S. Noble, president of the exchange; Samuel F. Streit, Ernest Groesbeck, Henry K. Pomroy and D. G. Geddes.

W. C. Van Antwerp, acting as spokesman, said that the closing of the exchange was decided upon following Germany's declaration of war. "The closing of the exchange," he declared, "is a precautionary measure. No real harm will be done and the action of the governors will probably accomplish a lot of good. It was decided that Germany's declaration of war would demoralize the market."

The stock exchanges in nearly all of the other cities in the country followed the lead of the New York Stock Exchange and closed.

The Curb market and the Consolidated Exchange are closed.

Following the announcement of three failures on the cotton exchange this morning and the panicky state of trading which marked the opening, the cotton market was closed soon after the opening.

There was no quotation for bar silver today. The market will remain closed until next Tuesday.

London Exchange Closed.

London, July 31.—The closing of the stock exchange here today has increased the terrible panic that first seized speculators and investors when the war talk began, and the financial situation now is in a state of unparalleled paralysis.

With the Bank of England raising its discount rate from 3 to 4 per cent, and the prospect of another advance being made within 24 hours, with wheat soaring to a record mark, an utter stagnation of the security market, two brokerage firms being forced to the wall over night

STOCK & CORDS

FLAWLESS RECORD FOR 53 YEARS

Dennis Cassin, for 53 years an engineer on the New York Central, and one of the best known railroad men in the country, closed his active career in the service of the road on Thursday when he piloted the Empire State express from New York to Albany. The engine was decorated with a huge wreath from Cassin's fellow employees in honor of the trip. The most remarkable feature of Cassin's long service is that never in all the time he has been connected with the road has he been in any way connected with an accident, a record which is thought to be unique in the history of railroading. He started his career with the road in 1861 and through his good work was repeatedly promoted until he finally became engineer of the Empire State express one of the most famous trains in the country.

Hit With a Brick.

Thursday evening while a number of small boys were playing on East Union street one of the boys picked up a brick and hurled it at the young son of Sam Seiberg of East Union street. The brick hit the lad on the back of the head knocking him down and cutting a deep gash, which bled freely. The lad was picked up and carried into Ginsberg's drug store on Broadway. Mr. Ginsberg, when he saw how badly the boy was hurt, advised that he be taken to a physician for treatment. Dr. Robinson of Abel street dressed the wound.

Hinduism.

In "Myths of the Hindus and Buddhists" is given this account of the origin of Hinduism: "Hinduism is, in fact, an immense synthesis, deriving its elements from a hundred different directions and incorporating every conceivable motive of religion. The motives of religion are manifold. Earth worship, sun worship, nature worship, sky worship, honor paid to heroes and ancestors, mother worship, father worship, prayers for the dead, the mystic association of certain plants and animals—all these and more are included within Hinduism. And each marks some single age of the past, with its characteristic conjunction or invasion of races formerly alien to one another. They are all welded together now to form a great whole. But still by visits to outlying shrines, by the study of the literature of certain periods and by carefully following up of threads it is possible to determine what were some of the influences that have entered into its making."

Guarded Himself Pretty Well.

Not many people guard their health so carefully as did Sir Tatton Sykes, who in winter wore five or six coats when out riding and shed some of them as he became warmer. Prince Potin-kine, however, took even stronger precautions against illness. If there was a touch of cold in the air he had fires lighted in his grounds before venturing to stroll in them. His waistcoats were made in two separate pieces, joined at the sides by buttons, so that he could take them off or put additional ones on without removing his coat. If caught in a shower he sheltered himself with an umbrella nearly two feet wide, which came down below his waist and was pierced with little windows. In very hot weather the prince wore boots coated with tln as a protection against mad dogs and carried sponges soaked with vinegar in his shirt front to ward off unpleasant smells.

CANNON'S HAT AGAIN IN THE RING.

Joseph G. Cannon.

Danville, Ill., July 31.—Declaring that he had not sought the nomination but that it had been urged upon him, J. G. Cannon, former speaker of the house of representatives, has made formal announcement of his candidacy for representative from the Eighteenth Illinois Congressional District. "I will be a candidate subject only to the primary election to be held September 9," he said. "If nominated I will make a vigorous campaign for my election. If another Republican shall be chosen I will make a vigorous campaign for his election."

Modern Education.

A prominent school principal lately told us some of the answers found in pupils' examination papers. Here are two of them: "What is a volcano?" "A volcano is a mountain that sometimes blows the equator off." "What is the difference between a mountain and a hill?" "A hill is like a mountain, only a mountain is a little more hillier."

KINGSTON, N. Y., JULY 31, 1914.

In spite of the new law against the sale of habit-forming drugs it is evident from the criminal court records that considerable quantities of these substances are still being used. This moves Mr. Anderson, the guiding spirit of the Anti-Saloon League, to write to the papers an argument that those who oppose prohibitory liquor laws because they do not prohibit ought to oppose the anti-drug law on the same ground. Such talk can impress only unthinking people. Experience has shown that the use of intoxicating liquors has increased as rapidly as "dry" territory has expanded, so that the prohibition laws are worse than useless. There has been no such experience with anti-drug laws, because they can be enforced since overwhelming public sentiment is back of them. We should be opposed to laws against murder if it had been demonstrated that they multiplied murders, and the same principle applies to all laws. Utility, not sentiment, is the test in all such matters.

The Cape Cod canal, just opened, is, as our readers know, a splendid thing. Judging by past experience, hundreds of lives will be saved as the years go by, voyages will be shortened by hours and sometimes by days, and millions of dollars will be saved. Now, it is well known that before Mr. Belmont's company carried this object through two other companies tried it and failed. As soon as the Belmont concern begins to pay large dividends, as will probably be the case, we suppose the Government will step in and make it lower its tolls to such a point that it will make 6 per cent or less on its investment, as is the fashion with railroads and other public properties. Of course, no appropriation will be made to reimburse the poor fellows who undertook the project previously and were impoverished. It is the accepted fashion now-a-days to tell pioneers that if they try something and fail it is their own lookout, while if they succeed they must divide up, giving the idle onlookers the lion's share.

Our Government is about to issue special two and five cent postage stamps in commemoration of the fact that we have had unbroken peace with Great Britain for one hundred years. The period would be much longer but for the fact that common sense was scarce in this country in 1812. Our statesmen of that day provoked a war with Great Britain over an issue that no longer existed and played into the hands of Napoleon, who represented everything that was abominable. When the Corsican fell and there was danger of Wellington coming to take charge of the British troops in the United States we had to make peace on rather inglorious terms. Nothing was said in the treaty regarding the alleged fight of England to impress seamen claiming to be American citizens, which was put forward as the pretext for the war, and the request of the United States that its control of the Mississippi River be recognized was refused. However, we are not celebrating a war, but a century of peace, and it can be done with postage stamps about as well as in any other way.

Going to war was a pretty good speculation a few centuries ago. A leader like Attila, "the Scourge of God," could march from one city to another, living on the country and collecting gold by the thousands of pounds. Whatever he took in was clear gain, since his soldiers took their own wages from the natives as they went along. The statesmen of Europe appear to think that times have not changed. They are blind to the fact that nothing can be gained now-a-days by exacting indemnities or acquiring territory. It has been shown by Norman Angell in his "Great Illusion" that if a German general should capture London and loot the treasure in the Bank of England for distribution among his soldiers he would impoverish himself by ruining the bank in Berlin in which his own fortune was deposited. Japan is poorer than ever since she acquired more territory by war. The hardest times Germany ever saw were in the decade following the payment to her of a tremendous war indemnity by France. The United States is out millions because of its wresting of island territory from Spain. There is no longer any possibility of any nation gaining anything through war—not even character. Otherwise, the Mexicans, who are fighting all the while, should be leaders in wealth and culture. Yet, in spite of common sense, the Hague tribunal remains a joke.

A BOY AND HIS MISSION.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

The story is told that at the time of the last great railroad strike in Paris, when strikers and troops were in daily conflict, a four-year-old American boy lived on the top floor of a big apartment house in Paris. One day he went out with his grandmother to visit a friend, and their way led through the busy streets where soldiers were much in evidence. They saw armed men marching through the streets, saw the old nunnery of St. Sulpice converted into barracks, watched the troops pouring in, the guards mounted at the gates and the soldiers everywhere. And the boy viewed it all with wide-open eyes.

In time they reached the friend's house, the lad bubbling over with excitement, for he had been much impressed by what he had seen in the streets. As he sat there, listening to all that was said, a young man came in with a story of the way the strike was spreading afar. He told that the strikers were throwing stones and coal, that the soldiers were moving the trains and that trouble was rapidly brewing. The startled blue eyes of the boy grew wider than ever and he sat perfectly still, straining his ears to catch every word.

That night when he went home he excitedly talked to his nurse about the strikers, the soldiers, the streets and all the strange events of the day. Then he closed his blue eyes, only to dream and to live it all over again in sleep.

The next day nothing was said about the strike, the strikers or the soldiers, but after luncheon was over, the little chap was nowhere to be seen. The household was aroused, but the boy could not be found, and after examining every window from which he might have fallen and inquiring and searching in vain, they heard a quick ring at the door bell. Hoping that someone might be coming with news, they hurried to the door, and there stood the missing lad, a sad little picture of woe, tears streaming down his chubby, stained cheeks, and his dimpled chin all a-tremble. All by his lone he had put on his hat and coat, climbed upon a chair to open the door and dragged his big coat down the long steps, and, finding stone steps. But when he was just about ready to slip into the street he pulled too hard on the bridle of his steed, and it snapped and became perfectly useless. So he rang the bell to summon help to go on with his mission.

And what were his plans for the day? Why, the little fellow was hurrying to the streets where the conflicts were growing tenser, for he thought it perfectly awful for big men to be throwing stones and powder at one another, and he was going to lend his small strength to prevent it!

And it certainly looks as if a big slice of the world might need the services of the valiant little peace-maker and his faithful hobby horse to make it understand that throwing stones and deadly powder is not a whole-some game for grown-up boys, and that it is never brave and splendid for the strong to fight the weak.

Several years have sped since the day when the little lad started out with his rocking-horse to plead for peace, but if he listens intently to the tales that float over the sea, and watches the war spirit flame high he will have occasion to grow as excited as then, as brave and determined.

For he will hear such disconcerting stories of the mighty cost of fighting that though his old steed may have been reposing in the attic for many a long day he will want to drag it out again, out where the stones are being thrown. But, gracious! He will have to hasten to Austria, to Serbia, and maybe to some of the other Balkan states, on to Russia, to France, to Germany, to Italy, to England, which has troubles enough without any more—and nobody knows where else. But when he hears of all the men to be drawn into the struggle if the struggle grows as predicted, he surely will grow too excited to sleep.

He will listen with bated breath as the huge losses to commerce are predicted, but it will be the estimated cost to human life that will stir him on to start out once again to try to keep the big men from fighting.

And it is enough to arouse the smallest boy of all just to read the prophecy of a surgeon who served with the Bulgarian troops in the last Balkan war. He says that once the forces were marshaled in the fighting field, the number of wounded and killed would jump up to 1,500,000 in one brief month. Possibly a great European war may come, possibly not; and perhaps the prediction of losses is right, perhaps it is wrong; but it comes from a man with grim enough experience, a man who has reason to remember that in the last Balkan war 150,000 men on both sides were killed or wounded in a single month.

And through it all, the most that we hear is about more territory, more power and the like, which may be enough in its way, but not enough when one starts thinking of the mighty price that has been paid in human lives just for the exchange of a paltry bit of land and the advantages that go with it.

One country wants a port, another wants to go on holding it, one has an old score to settle and all have something on the side, so they start at-throwing stones. And when it is all over, the fields are red with blood, and the tide of human progress has been turned back once again.

Somehow one lacks the heart even to read about all the tangled stories and all the miserable pretenses that connect one country with the other, for it does seem that the big human family ought to be able to live and let live, without any more fighting.

FRANCES SHAFFER.

ONE GILDED SOUSE.

Theron Houghtaling Had it and Recorder Grogan Turned Him Loose.

The beautiful golden glow of the setting sun had nothing on Theron Houghtaling's complexion this morning when he was arraigned before Recorder Grogan on a charge of public intoxication. Theron was picked up on upper Broadway by Policeman Hess and this morning was discharged by the recorder. He said he had been on a spree for the past two weeks and he had not fully recovered. Thursday evening while asleep in a saloon some joker was seized with the brilliant idea of improving Theron's natural beauty and securing a bottle of gold paint used for gilding the gold chairs that may still be seen in some parlors. The joker went to work on Theron's face and when the job was completed Theron was a sight. Artistic circles were drawn on both cheeks and his face was otherwise gaily decorated. Not only was Theron's face a beautiful golden hue but both shoes had been gilded and Theron was easily able to see his complexion in them. That is he would have been able to but he was unable to bend down without falling. Theron's spree lasted two weeks and it will take about that time to rid himself of his complexion by the plentiful use of soap and water.

Family Jar at Steep Rocks.

The family troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Longlais of Steep Rocks were aired in recorder's court this morning when Felix appeared before Recorder Grogan in response to a complaint made against him by his wife, charging him with non-support. After each had told his story it was finally settled that Felix, who works on Terry's brickyard at East Kingston, was to give his wife $3 a week. E. A. McKiernan appeared as counsel for Felix. Husband and wife have not been living together for the past two weeks. When Felix was asked what the trouble was he replied that if he could not be boss any more in his own home he was going to get out.

Committed From Gardiner.

Earle Goes, aged 23 years, a former resident of this city, was brought to the county jail on Wednesday to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of assault in the second degree, having been committed by Justice Denton of the town of Gardiner. It is charged that Goes made a criminal assault on two girls, one 14 and the other 9 years of age. The parents of the girls were not at home when he entered the house and the screams of the girls brought the neighbors running to the house. Goes is a seaman in the navy and is on a furlough.

A Saugerties Heir.

Edgar J. Barrett, who recently conducted an aluminum store in Hansen's building on Livingston street, Saugerties, is a beneficiary under an aunt's will to the amount of $20,000. The aunt resided in Port Jervis where Barrett's home is.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

"Pa, what do they put water in stocks for?" "To soak the investors with, my son."—Boston Transcript.

"Owens says it costs him $6,000 a year to live." "Costs him? Cost his creditors."—Boston Transcript.

"Is this out-door sleeping arrangement you propose, tentative?" "Oh, no. You can take a shack if you don't like the tents."—Baltimore American.

"You prefer swords to pistols when you engage in a duel?" "Yes," replied the Frenchman. "Swords enable you to get in more gestures."—Washington Star.

The Housewife—"Why, see here, aren't you one of the tramps to whom I gave a pie last April?" Weary Walkins—"Yes, ma'am. You gave it to 'ree of us. I'm de survivor."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Traveller (to disconsolate fellow-voyager, at steamship's rail)—"My dear old fellow! What's the matter? The sea's like a duck-pond!" "I know, old boy—but I've taken six different remedies."—Punch.

Auto Demonstrator (who has been trying for three hours to sell the car)—"Now I will throw in the clutch." Uncle Eben—"I'll take the machine, then. I knew if I held off long enough you'd give me something to boot."—Puck.

First Editorial Writer—"I've been making a study of this union labor bill in order to write a leader about it." Second Editorial Writer—"How much do you know?" "Well I know enough to write about it as if I knew something."—Life.

"You don't seem to arouse much political enthusiasm out our way," commented Senator Sorghum. "I'm afraid the partisan spirit is gradually fading," admitted the scout. "What's the reason?" "Well, you see nobody takes money for a vote any more, but every campaigner needs a brass band. So everybody has quit taking an interest in practical politics and has gone to studying music."—Washington Star.

From the Rear.

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who has already occupied the platform for 20 minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman, may I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much desultory conversation going on in different parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying." Voice from the back of the hall—"Don't be downhearted. You're not missing much."—Chicago News.

"The Man From Mars."

Representative "Hammy" Moore of Pennsylvania has become known throughout the country as the father of the waterways. Rivers, harbors, canals and dredging matters are as constantly conspicuous in his conversation as a leading news table. Like Paul Dombey, he can say of the sound of the waters "in dreams it still with me."

His colleague, Representative G. W. Edmonds, met Moore the other day and immediately began joshing him about his hobby.

"Do you know, Moore," he asked, "why it is that you remind me of an inhabitant of the planet Mars?" Mr. Moore avowed his inability to see any relation between himself and the aforesaid astronomical body.

"Well," replied Edmonds, "the reason is, Hammy, because you are so full of canals."—Washington Star.

Warning.

A musical hall artist recently said of marriage. "It is very stupid for a poor young man to marry an extravagant girl. To such a young man I'd say: 'When poverty knocks at the door, loves flies out to dinner with a chap in a motor car.'"—New York Telegraph.

Familiar to Him.

In London they tell of a certain statesman who is an optimist on all points save marriage.

One afternoon this statesman was proceeding along a country road when he saw a cottager eating his supper alone in the road before his dwelling.

"Why, Henry," asked the statesman, "why are you eating out here alone?"

"Well, sir, er—" the man stammered—"the er—chimney smokes." "That's too bad," said the statesman, his philanthropic sentiments at once being aroused. "I'll have it fixed for you. Let's have a look at it."

And before the cottager could stop him the statesman proceeded to enter the cottage. As soon as he had opened the door a broomstick fell upon his shoulders and a woman's voice shrieked:

"Back here again, are you, you old rascal! Clear out with you or I'll —The statesman retired precipitately. The cottager sat in the road shaking his head in sorrow and embarrassment. The statesman bent over him and laid his hand in kindly fashion on his arm.

"Never mind, Henry," said he consolingly, "my chimney smokes sometimes, too."—Harper's Magazine.

Must Be Sold

It is a genuine feast of bargains. It is a positive clearance of Spring and Summer Goods. Never before were our stocks so large at this season. You would be doing your pocketbook a grievous injustice to miss this astonishing money-saving event, which occurs but twice a year—January and August—when merchandise is sold regardless of cost—when costs cuts no figure. No matter how far away you live it will pay you handsomely to participate in this gigantic distribution.

Sale Starts Saturday Morning, August 1, at 9:00 O'Clock Sharp with a large force of sales-people to wait upon you. Everything must be sold; we will not carry over one piece of merchandise into next season. This is an ironclad rule with us, therefore look for big bargains. Choose to your heart's content from this beautiful collection. They are mostly staple styles—always good. We have customers that come every year from near-by states to attend these sales—it's become a habit with them. They buy all their wearables, regular wardrobes, and they save big money—something worth while. To miss it would be a great mistake. Woman's World

Tacoma, Wash., Has the First Woman Police Judge.

JUDGE NELDA JAEGER.

While women have presided in children's courts, a woman on the bench of a general police court is a novelty. Washington, one of the states where women vote, has one. She is Miss Nelda Jaeger, an able member of the Washington bar, who was recently appointed as police judge in Tacoma, Wash. When Miss Jaeger first took her position on the bench the court attendants were temporarily embarrassed, for they did not know exactly how to address her. The dignity and lack of self-consciousness on the part of the new official carried off the situation gracefully, and in a short time they were addressing her as "Judge Jaeger" and "your honor" as though women magistrates were quite an ordinary and everyday matter. Miss Jaeger's knowledge of the law and her womanly tact combine to make her a successful and popular official.

THE SEASHORE WARDROBE.

For the Little Folks It Should Be Dainty and Appropriate.

Children at the seaside resorts must be provided with an entirely different kind of a wardrobe from that needed for the country. One that ascends at a bound from the bathing suit or sand frock to the glories of an elaborate creation is required. For the former the little ones wear their rompers or jumper suits, overalls or bathing suits, both in the water and on the sands, the rompers being made of strong wash material and the bathing suits of flannel, serge or mohair.

Evening finds them dressed in the daintiest of frocks, slippers, stockings and ribbons, though even here economy may be practiced without detection. Instead of purchasing a great number of frocks it will be better to get a few and have numerous little accessories, such as dainty aprons, correct footwear, ribbons and bows, all of which help so much toward making a child's outfit attractive.

Shoes, whether high or low, should be substantial for day wear, slippers to be donned in the evening only. Sunbonnets of white lawn or dimity in delicate shades are dainty and picturesque and more practical than hats.

Gay Waistcoats.

Roman striped and plaided waistcoats are exceedingly smart with tailors of dark serge or mohair, but with a suit of lighter colored fabric the flowered silk waistcoat is prettiest. Pussy willow taffeta in molaire effect makes a charming waistcoat for a golden brown tulleur. Another suit with a short cut-away Eton jacket has a waistcoat of Egyptian crape in post-impressionist design.

Jet Buttons.

Small jet buttons are much used on vests and neckwear. Large crocheted buttons in round and square designs of one or two colors are used on coats of heavy corded cottons and on linen and ratine dresses and suits. There are many fancy stitches introduced in these buttons.

WASHING LACES.

To launder a linen, clumsy or any other lace centerpiece successfully, wash carefully, boil, rinse and blue, but do not starch.

Spread a sheet on rug, lay the centerpiece right side down and begin to pin, being sure to stretch while pinning and catch every scallop.

When finished there should not be a wrinkle in it.

While still damp press with an iron not too hot and leave on floor until perfectly dry.

It will come out beautifully, much nicer than if you had sent it to a dry cleaner.

To wash white silk gloves put gloves on hands, use white soap, turn on the faucet and wash the same as if you were washing your hands. If finger tips are very much soiled use soft brush.

Rinse thoroughly; then with a clean towel rub gently toward elbow until most of the moisture is absorbed; then slip off and hang out to dry. They will not need pressing.

Best Meats, Littlest Cost at Hapeman's Saturday Sale

Eat as good meat as there is because it's less expensive than to eat doubtful kinds. Our market strives to mean just this much to you—a day-by-day protection against inferior grades of meats.

The value of wholesome meats depends upon how good they are. If you buy the tough, stringy kinds, it does not comfort you much to know that you get them "cheap." But when you come here and buy the best, tenderest, juiciest cuts, at about the same price, then you are practicing real economy. Visit our sale or telephone Saturday and become convinced of our high qualities and fair prices.

Between Bugles

A Salt Water Romance.

By MATTHEW WHITE, JR.
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The dressing bugle had sounded some time since, but Dorothy still stood looking out over the sea. She was thinking how unfortunate it was that dinner on shipboard always robbed her of a view of the sunset. She was a good sailor and consequently had no excuse for taking her meals on deck.

"Still, if this were the only thing I had to worry over," she reflected, "I might indeed be a happy woman."

And this was why Dorothy Shaw was a mystery to all her friends. She refused to be happy, though rich.

"Try it yourselves," she would reply to their expressions of incredulity. "Have so much money left you that your every movement is followed by reporters. If you happen to order a different paper on Friday from the one you bought on Thursday you are certain that you will read in all of them on Saturday that you have decided to give a million to the campaign fund."

She felt that she could trust no one. By sorry experience she had learned that wealth was a bait few could resist, and "How much does he or she want now?" was her first thought on the advances of every new friend she made.

Finally in desperation she had taken passage in a slow ship under an assumed name, but even so was beset by the constant fear that some one on board would have seen her picture in the papers when her uncle left her the fortune which was her nightmare. That was an additional reason why she liked to linger on deck after most of her fellow passengers had gone down to array themselves for dinner.

"Oh!"

The exclamation was forced from her by a sudden gust of wind that took her tam on its wings and blew it straight across the gap of lower afterdeck that intervened on the Alicia between the first and second cabins.

The next instant she smiled and barely refrained from applauding. A man standing well forward on the deck had stretched out his hand and caught the traitor bit of red worsted as it went whizzing by him.

A half minute later and the two were standing on the neutral territory of the deck below for Dorothy had descended in order to meet him halfway in restoring her property.

"I'm very much obliged," said she. "Not at all," said the man.

He was tall and straight and had the clear blue eyes that Dorothy preferred above all others.

She was about to turn back when the other exclaimed:

"Look! there's a whale! He's just spouted. He'll come up again in a minute, if you care to watch. See where my finger points."

Dorothy certainly did care to watch. In all her crossings she had never seen a whale. Now she was rewarded with a fine view of a large specimen.

As it happened, the one kept on in the direction of the steamer for a while, and after each spout she felt she must wait and see the next one. And then her companion seemed to know a good deal about the creature, which he imparted in a voice which possessed for Dorothy an indefinable charm.

Voices were a sort of hobby with her. She often declared that this was the one point on which she was not thoroughly patriotic—she could not bring herself to admire the average American accent.

But this stranger's voice puzzled her. He looked and dressed like one of her countrymen, but he spoke with neither the western brogue, the southern twang, the Boston affectation nor the New York finch.

She did not know until some weeks later that he was English born, but had come to the States as a young fellow hoping for better opportunities to make a living than his mother country afforded him. He was returning to England to claim a sum of money left him by an uncle.

The dinner bugle sounded, and the man, as if reminded by its notes that he belonged in a different atmosphere (the second cabin is called to meals by a pebbled bell), lifted his cap and walked away.

For the remainder of the voyage Sherwood Roberts hung over the back rail to gaze into the swirl of waters surging out from the twin screws and curse the fate that had led to his meeting this pretty woman on the present trip instead of on the one he expected to take a few weeks later.

"I might as well be a thousand miles away from her as in second cabin," he muttered between clenched teeth. "Idiot that I was for coming this way. And to think that within ten days I could lay a fortune at her feet. And the conventions won't even permit that I send her a note to say that this is positively my last appearance in poverty. But perhaps I'll meet her in London."

He never did, however, although he haunted Hyde park and the fashionable hotels after his claim to his uncle's property had been established and he had come into the possession of that which enabled him to dress three times a day.

"I wonder now," he would sometimes ask himself, "if I had put my pride in my pocket and borrowed enough on my expectations to come over first instead of second, would things have turned out differently? She looked as if she didn't mind so very much my having detained her to talk about whales. I wonder if—"

But what was the use of wondering anything about a woman he would probably never see again?

So this Englishman who had lived so long in the States that he could not keep away from them re-embarked for his adopted country in a first cabin deck room and tried to be happy in spite of a handicap that he couldn't forget.

During the first night out it came on to blow great guns. Roberts lay in his berth late, debating whether to get up or not, when suddenly something shot through his open port and hit him squarely in the face.

It was soft and red, with gold threads running through it, and—

"Great Scott!" ejaculated Roberts, starting up in his berth. "Her tam!"

Surely there could not be two of them—at least, he hoped there couldn't. But how had it come into his cabin?

It could not be possible that she knew he was there and had taken this means of apprising him of her presence? Why, she had scarcely spoken half a dozen words to him in her life.

But the cap was hers unmistakably. He fondled it fondly for a minute or two and then got up and proceeded to dress with all speed, or at least with as much speed as was consistent with the rolling of the vessel.

All day he haunted the ladies' room and the decks, almost deserted on account of the storm, and had begun to read the cards affixed beside each stateroom door when he suddenly remembered the foolishness of this plan to find a woman whose name he did not know.

"This is simply maddening," he told himself after a day of fine weather and still no sight of the tam's owner. "At this rate she will escape me again."

Then he bethought him of a brilliant expedient.

He took a pen and wrote the following notice:

Found.—A lady's red tam, shot with gold. Owner may have same by applying at cabin 22 between bugles any evening.

This he affixed to the bulletin board in the companionway and that night dressed a half hour before the first bugle sounded so as to be in readiness to receive company during the period named.

But nobody appeared that evening nor the next, and now there were only two days left on the voyage.

He had passed a half hour of impatient waiting in the stuffy stateroom on the third day of the notice, and, quite discouraged, threw open his door to go to dinner, when he stepped squarely into the person who had emerged from her room just opposite in the narrow entryway.

"I beg your pardon," said Roberts, and then he fairly gasped as he realized that the other person was the lady of the tam.

"I have something of yours," he blurted out—"that red tam you lost once before."

The girl's cheeks suddenly took on the hue of the cap that hung over Roberts' berth.

"Oh," she said, "was it your port I flung it into? I didn't know. It started to blow away again that first morning, and I thought I was tossing it into my own cabin."

"And you've been just across that five foot space," Roberts rejoined, "while I've been ransacking the ship for you—to restore the tam." He hastened to add, "Didn't you see the notice on the bulletin board?"

"No. This is the first I've been out since the storm. It left me with a nasty reminder of the shaking we all received. I'm so glad to be on deck again! Did you have a pleasant trip on the other side?"

"Jolly fine," answered Roberts. "But he wasn't thinking of the other side at all when he said it, but of the woman he had lost and found again."

Unconsciously they had walked to that part of the deck where Dorothy had been standing when the tam blew off on the voyage over.

"I suppose I must pin the cap in tightly this time," she remarked. "You won't be there to catch it if it flies off again." And she glanced over at the second cabin.

He looked up at the one she was wearing.

"That's a very pretty tam," he observed irrelevantly. "I trust it is sketched in tightly."

Whether she read his inner meaning, she gave no token then, but suggested that it was high time they both went down to dinner. The next night was the dance, and after the final two-step she reminded him that in the morning there would be the bustle of landing.

"And I haven't relieved you of that tam yet," she added.

"I shall miss it very much," he replied. "And you won't need it now the voyage is over."

"Yes," she said softly, her eyes fixed on Nantucket light, toward which they were swiftly cutting their way. "I suppose it has served its purpose, but I don't want to lose it again."

Roberts knew she wasn't thinking of all the words implied, but he was quick enough to seize at the opening, and—well, before they faced the customs officers on the pier he knew where to take the tam.

But he always forgets to carry it with him when he calls, and when Dorothy one evening said "Yes" to a certain question he asked her she added, "This is a desperate step to take to regain possession of a little old red tam-o'-shanter."

She had made a mental note. Instructor in Latin—Miss B., of what was Ceres the goddess?

Miss B.—She was the goddess of marriage.

Instructor—Oh, no! Of agriculture.

Miss B. (looking perplexed)—Why, I am sure my book says she was the goddess of husbandry—Philadelphia Ledger.

One Drawback.

Striving to Make Lay's Market Absolutely Perfect

We are constantly striving to make our market a more attractive place at which to shop and to carry at all times the finest quality meats it is possible to obtain. Amidst our efforts to carry out those ideals, we find that we are human, and that sometimes we fall short. Won't you help us by telling us if anything goes wrong? If meats are not exactly what you expected them to be, if orders are not delivered promptly and in good condition; if salespeople are not polite and efficient; whenever, for any cause, you feel dissatisfied with this market, WON'T YOU PLEASE TELL US? We want to make this a more satisfying market to our friends. And if our Saturday price quotations do not appear to be as low as you would like to see them, remember it is not our fault. The wholesalers are to blame, and they are entitled to the brick if you feel like hurling one.

THE MAN OF A THOUSAND

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

They called him "Judge" Dale because in the far west you never "mistake" a man when you can call him "colonel" or "Judge." As James Dale looked more like a judge than a colonel, they called him as I have said. He was a mine owner, and when things went wrong he could make hot times for his engineers and foremen, but he didn't do it in a vulgar way. He was always a gentleman, even when he cussed the hardest. As a matter of fact, the judge's motto was "good form," and he carried it out in his clothes, his cigars, his dinners.

I have it on good authority that Judge Dale was not vulgarly started when he received word from Denver that his handsome wife, to whom he had been married five years and who was visiting friends, had taken an old lover's arm and severed conjugal relations by eloping. He went through the daily routine just the same for two or three days, and he had the same placid look and the same even voice as he called his head clerk into the private office and said:

"Thomas, I am going away for a few days, and you will take charge." "Yes, sir," replied Thomas, and the next morning the judge was on his way to Denver. He picked up his clew there without having elbowed anything or soiled the polish of his shoes. He met friends and talked politics and real estate and mines, and, lighting a fresh cigar, he took a train for the east. Arriving in New York city, he paid a detective to locate the couple.

A steamer was sailing for the Mediterranean at the end of the fourth day, and when she departed the judge was one of her passengers. There were more than a hundred others, and as the weather was also stormy for the first two or three days out no one commented on the fact that the passenger who was registered as Major Davis stuck close to his cabin and had his meals brought to him by a steward. Judge Dale had changed his name, but he had no idea of changing his identity. There were laughter and conversation and a clatter of dishes as all the passengers finally gathered for dinner for the first time since leaving Sandy Hook. To the right of the captain sat one of the handsomest ladies and one of the finest looking gentlemen on the list; but, taken altogether, it was a grand array of wealth and culture. Dinner was fairly under way and the lady on the captain's right was beaming when she happened to cast her eyes down the table, and her face went as white as death in a second. Half a dozen people caught her words as she whispered to her supposed husband:

"John, there is the judge!" The man looked, and the color went out of his cheeks and his jaw fell. Near the foot of the table sat the man who had taken a new name. He was cool and placid, and only the ghost of a smile hovered around his mouth. He looked the woman and the man full in the eyes for a minute, but made no sign of recognition.

"What is it?" asked the captain as "Mrs. Bemis" shuddered and gasped and seemed on the point of fainting. "A sudden illness—heart trouble!" she stammered as she left the table for her stateroom.

At every meal Major Davis faced the guilty pair. Some of the passengers suspected nothing, but others insisted that there was a queer mystery about. The major gave nothing away. It wouldn't have been good form. The woman avoided him as far as possible, but two or three times a day he found excuse to speak to her.

The steamer was to call at the Azores. One morning about 10 o'clock she made harbor, and it was given out aboard that she would not get away before midnight. Everybody was anxious for a brief run ashore—everybody but Mrs. Bemis. She feared that she might overexert and bring on another attack of heart trouble. Mr. Bemis had decided to stay with her when Major Davis hunted him out and said:

"I trust you will make one of a little party going ashore, and that you will bring your revolver along as I shall mine!"

"The party is—is"—began Mr. Bemis as his face blanched.

"A very exclusive one—just the two of us, you see. You have a pistol, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Ah, of course! We may find game, you know. Do you wish to speak to your wife first?"

"No."

"She's gone to lie down, eh? Well, let's be off."

The two engaged a boat as soon as landing and pulled away to a wooded cape, and two hours later a dead man was brought back in the boat. It was Mr. Bemis. He had accidentally shot himself while shooting at a bird.

When the accident became known and it was found that Mrs. Bemis was to go on with the ship instead of ashore to see her husband to his last resting place, there was an outcry over her want of feeling, but it did not reach her ears. She was in the stateroom under the doctor's care, and none of the passengers saw her again. When the major had finished his work at the island he took a steamer for New York and home, and upon entering his office at the usual hour and in the usual way he said to his chief clerk:

"Thomas, I am back and feeling better. Bring me the balance sheets for the past four weeks."

Was Looking for It, Too. "I say, my friend," called the motorist to the farmer, as he drew up alongside of the field. "I'm looking for a decent road to take me into Squigglesville." "I'm durned glad to hear it," replied the farmer. "If ye happen to find it, stranger, send me a telegram, will ye?"

PULLING TEETH WITHOUT PAIN

This week a lady came into our office and asked to have five teeth pulled. The nurse took her to a chair, She insisted on gas.

The operator told her that there was no pain in extracting teeth with our new "Local Anesthetic." At first she was insistent on gas, but decided to try one tooth with the "Local."

When the first tooth was pulled she laughed and said: "Go ahead, doctor, and pull the other four."

This new method is far in advance of the dangerous and sickening process of extracting teeth with gas. It is painless and perfectly safe.

Open evenings to 9. Sundays 9 to 1.

Are You Eating Squabs Regularly?

You ought to. They are delicious. Squabs are young pigeons only four weeks old. Perhaps you have bought in the markets old pigeons, often offered as squabs. They are comparatively tough and stringy. The genuine squabs, such as we sell, are right out of the nest, fat, plump, juicy, weighing from fourteen ounces to a pound apiece. They are fully feathered. Same as old birds. Squabs are highly esteemed as an article of food because the juice of the squab (which is pure liquid protoplasm) is the most nourishing and vitalizing fluid known. In fact there is no bird or flesh food that can equal the squab for condensed nourishment. We can supply squabs at any time on receipt of your order. Prices 75 cents per pair, by parcel post 15 cents extra.

Shader's Comparison Sale of Pure Foods Saturday

If we didn't know that our Groceries, Meats and Provisions and our prices were what we have always claimed for them—if we didn't know that we could carry conviction to the hearts of all who patronize our store—do you believe we would waste time, energy and money telling you how much better you can do here than elsewhere? Our Saturday Sale, which we intend as a Comparison event, provides convincing evidence of our ability to give sterling food values which are not equalled in Kingston. We do an enormous business, turning over our lines quickly and thus must needs carry only pure, fresh goods, which are offered at prices as low as others ask for articles that have been in stock long enough to be entitled to vote.

CARRIES FINANCIAL MARKETS OF WORLD ON ITS SHOULDERS.

The New York Stock Exchange.

New York, July 31.—With bourses and stock exchanges throughout the world closed down as a result of the Austro-Servian war, the New York stock exchange, the only exchange in the world that is open and doing business, stands as a Rock of Gibraltar against panic and disaster. Financiers, investors, security holders and speculators of Vienna, Paris, Berlin and the smaller European centers have turned to New York as the one open and free market for their transactions. H. G. F. Noble, president of the New York Stock Exchange, has said, "The fact that New York's stock exchange alone had a free and unrestricted market today is a tribute to the sound condition of American finance."

Adversity's Only Sure Bet.
Don't place too much dependence in human nature—not because men in general are untrustworthy, which I do not mean to imply, but because they are human. Promises are often born of momentary enthusiasm and made with the best intentions of ultimate fulfillment. But things happen, conditions change, ardor cools; the sentiment of liberality is superseded by one of selfish interest, and pledges made in the best of faith are forgotten.
Everything human is frail and mutable. The nature of a man may change with each new environment, but the coin of the realm has a fixed and dependable value. You may fail to cash in on promises, but you can always collect 100 cents on a dollar bill.
That's the reason I say to you that it's all right to have faith in men, but put your implicit trust in cash. It's the only sure bet in the moment of adversity.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Origin of the Argentine Flag.
Mr. Fraser, in telling of the origin of the Argentine flag, says: "The emphatic patriotism of the American is twined alongside the hot blooded nationality of Argentina. It is daily inculcated in the schools; the blue and white striped flag is honored on every occasion. When the Argentines were in revolution against Spain in 1810 and needed a banner to flaunt against the red and orange of the enemy they got pieces of blue and white cloth intended for garments from an English warship lying at Montevideo and made a flag of it. So the Argentine flag, like much of Argentine prosperity, is due to Great Britain." Mr. Fraser holds that, in proportion to the population, there are as many millionaires in Argentina as in the United States.—Westminster Gazette.

Housemaid Courtesies.
A gayly gowned and garrulous housemaid sat down by an acquaintance on a trolley, and at once said: "Hello, Sadie! Where you livin' now?" "Nowheres," was the reply. "How's that?" "I'm married." "You ain't?" "Sure thing. Look at that!" She held up her ungloved left hand in triumph, for there on the third finger was a shining new wedding ring. Staring at it in wonder for a moment, the other girl asked, "Well, who got stung?"—Chicago Herald.

SYNOPSIS OF REPORT BY COMPTROLLER'S CLERKS

Industrial Home and Tuberculosis Hospital Payments Were "Illegal" and Almost Everybody Seems to Have Used the Wrong Kind of Red Tape.

The report of H. T. O'Brien and Mark Graves, the bookkeepers employed by the state comptroller's office at Albany, to go over the books of the different counties, which was filed with the county treasurer on Thursday, is a document covering 358 typewritten pages.

The bookkeepers insist in their written report, as they did when they were in Kingston during the past winter and spring, that all bills paid by the board of supervisors for which there is no particular directions in the law, are "illegal," and they have classified the bills of which they disapprove into "irregular audits," "illegal payments" and "illegal audits."

In examining the county treasurer's accounts since January 1, they found an error of five cents, and they call attention to it in a footnote which says:

"Note. This error was located by examiner and corrected on treasurer's books."

It should be explained that the bookkeepers call themselves "examiners."

Should Work Without Compensation.

The report begins by stating that an examination of Ulster county was made in 1909 and it appears that little or no attention was paid to the recommendations and findings in the report of that examination. "Some of the illegal practices therein referred to were discontinued but others are still in force and on the whole there appears to have been a disposition to continue existing practices whether the same be legal or illegal. This is especially true of the board of supervisors who, although the previous report pointed out the illegality of items in the bills of its members, have continued annually to vote themselves large sums of money as compensation for services for which no compensation is provided by law. The former county treasurer has collected and retained fees to which he was not entitled and the same is true of the former county clerk. Many errors are shown below in the levy of taxes and tables are given which show losses to several of the towns because of errors in the apportionment of the county taxes. The bills of a former sheriff are shown to contain charges which appear to have been made in violation of the penal statutes and the attention of the district attorney is directed to the same."

Salaries Paid Monthly—Why Pay Them at All?

The report states that the county officials and their salaries, but says that the law provides the salaries of County Judge Jenkins and Surrogate Gill are payable quarterly, but "Notwithstanding this explicit provision of the statute the salaries of the officials mentioned have been paid in equal monthly installments." Sheriff Doyle's salary is also payable quarterly, but "Contrary to the statute this salary has been paid monthly."

What "It Is Believed" About Bonds.

The bonds of the county officers meet the law's requirements except those of the late Sheriff Archibald McLaughlin and of Sheriff Doyle, which have two instead of three sureties. With reference to bonds of town collectors, the report states that "Although it is believed these bonds are not strictly in the form prescribed by the statute and that the indemnity of the collector is not the town but the collector himself, nevertheless the principal object has been attained in that ample security has been furnished by the collectors. In the future, however, the form should be changed and collectors required to execute an undertaking instead of a bond."

The bonds of the various banks which are depositories are set forth fully, but the bonds are filed with the county treasurer instead of the county clerk. The bonds contain the provision that the banks "shall obey all lawful and reasonable orders." The report says the word "reasonable" is superfluous, it is certainly unnecessary and ought to be eliminated in the future.

Assessment and Taxation.

The report next takes up the subject of assessment and taxation. The form of assessment roll is the form prescribed by law, but the descriptions of property made by the assessors of the towns are reported to be inaccurate and insufficient for the purposes for which they are required. (This criticism of the tax rolls has been made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners when they have visited Ulster county every other year, for many years, and they have stated that they found the assessment rolls throughout the state in the same condition—that they did not strictly comply with the law.) The criticism and directions of the State Tax Commissioners are quoted in the report, and the inaccuracies in describing property are pointed out in detail.

Criticism of Equalization.

In 1912 and 1913 the board of supervisors equalized valuations in the manner prescribed by the tax law. This method was not employed in 1911, but "was probably due to lack of knowledge on the part of the board of supervisors, the present method not having been required prior to October 1, 1911. Chapter 801 of the laws of 1911 became effective on that day, and made a radical change in the method of equalizing valuations."

The principal criticism of the comptroller's bookkeepers in regard to equalization is that the assessed value of the stock of banks subject to tax must be included in the aggregate amount of taxable property of the county and of the tax districts, which practice is not followed in Ulster county. (The board of supervisors has determined that the bank stock, which is required by another law to pay a tax of one per cent on its capital stock and undivided surplus, is not to be again taxed by having the stock included in the personal property list which goes to make up the total assessed valuation on which the equalization is based and the tax collected. The comptroller's bookkeepers hold otherwise, and cite a decision in a case arising in the western part of the state to support their contention.) The bookkeepers accordingly "calculated" the apportionments for 1909 to 1913 inclusive, to show what the tax districts gained or lost by reason of "erroneous apportionments," suggesting that the board in making up the next tax levy, adjust and apportion such gains and losses, and exclude from the apportionment of years prior to 1909 the entire sum improperly charged to certain towns be credited to them, and that the city of Kingston and the few towns which have profited by these errors be charged with the amounts they have profited by reason thereof."

According to the comptroller's bookkeepers, the "calculated" gains and losses arising from the method of equalization is as follows:

Gains.
Kingston City	$18,938 44
New Paltz	3,922 54
Saugerties	9,218 18

Town Auditors Don't Make Duplicate Lists.

The failure of town boards of auditors to make duplicate lists of bills audited, certified, and signed by a majority of its members, is criticized, and the bookkeepers say "It is believed that the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors to levy taxes and to pay town accounts" can be exercised only on presentation of evidence, "in the form prescribed by law" of the audit of such accounts. The board should see that the law is "strictly" complied with by the town boards.

"Illegal" to Raise Money by Resolution.

The resolutions introduced annually by the supervisors, and adopted by the board, to add items to the town abstracts which were omitted when the audits were made by the town boards, or for charges arising after the town auditors have met, is declared by the bookkeepers to be "illegal."

The form of tax warrant delivered to the town collectors is disapproved, because the bookkeepers say it "is liable to mislead a collector as to his powers and duties, and they recommend that the form be changed. The practice to attach separate warrants for the collection of fire taxes, water district taxes and lighting district taxes meets with evident disapproval, and the supervisors should direct the money to be paid directly to the county treasurer. It is also recommended that hereafter the abstract of the tax rolls to be furnished to the county treasurer by the clerk of the board of supervisors shall state fully the amount of each kind or class of taxes levied or reassessed, and the names of the persons to whom such taxes are payable.

County Treasurer Should Change Bookkeeping.

The bookkeepers do not approve the way in which the county treasurer keeps his general ledger account with each town. The treasurer, they say, should charge to each collector (not to each town), in the general ledger the full amount which each is to collect, as shown by the supervisors' clerk; otherwise, "the measure of control contemplated and prescribed by law is lost."

The procedure in regard to the county treasurer's methods of keeping account of the returned tax account is pronounced "entirely" irregular and not in compliance with the law nor with the system of accounting prescribed by the comptroller.

How the County Lost $2,272.04.

The report continues: "The county has suffered a loss of $2,272.04 during the period examined by reason of the fact that the county treasurer charged respective two per centum of the taxes assessed against residents and non-residents, and later credited such towns with the taxes allowed by the state comptroller or paid in cash plus a penalty of five per centum."

"Briefly, to correct these errors the county treasurer should, upon settlement with respective collectors, credit them with the amount of taxes returned. He should not charge the returned taxes to towns. Towns do not owe these taxes. They are assets of the county, and the statute provides means by which the county treasurer is to collect them for the county."

"A part, or even all may, under sections 106 and 108 of the tax law, eventually become charges against the towns, but only upon the conditions and after the events herein specified, and not until they are eligible for levy upon the whole town as provided by law."

The bookkeepers then tell the county treasurer, in detail, how the entries must be made to follow out their recommendations.

County Loses $1,680.70 More.

The bookkeepers, by showing that the bookkeeping is wrong, also prove to their own satisfaction that the county likewise in five years lost $1,680.70 on returned school tax accounts. "This loss," they say, "was probably due to a variety of causes: First, the supervisors may not have reassessed each item furnished to them; second, through lack of control over collectors, they may have collected, and, in some instances, it is known that they did to the county treasury; and, third, rejected school taxes were not charged against towns as they should have been under sections 433 and 435 of the education law."

The bookkeepers do not show there was any loss to anyone through the returns of unpaid taxes, but they criticize the manner in which the returns are made by town collectors which they say in many instances "have been in poor and unintended form," and they recommend "that the literal requirements of the statute be complied with."

What Summer Residents May Do.

Criticism is also made because the county treasurer, as transmitted to the state comptroller, returned taxes upon property described in the return or for which descriptions were furnished by the supervisors. The report says: "In some instances, as for instance the town of Shandaken, there has been an understanding that the supervisor would not furnish descriptions, but, on the other hand, that he would act as collector during the summer and collect of non-resident owners, mostly of summer people—their unpaid taxes. The reason assigned for this practice was that the collector could not get in touch with these people during the collection period, the winter, and that it was a matter of convenience to permit non-residents to pay the supervisors during the summer. This is a plausible argument, but for the fact that it is contrary to law, might well be continued."

Then the bookkeepers point out that if summer residents want to get their tax bills in winter, they can pay a fee of one dollar and have their name registered in the town clerk's office, when tax bills will be sent to them.

Fraser Didn't Use Red Tape.

Under the heading of "Compensation of County Clerk," the bookkeepers quote sections of the mortgage tax law, now a part of the tax law, and show that from January 1, 1907, to December 31, 1912, County Clerk John D. Fraser received from the receipts of mortgage taxes for estate and other taxes, $2,212.75, and quote an opinion of the attorney general in a Tompkins county case that sums allowed by the state board of tax commissioners in a somewhat similar case, should be paid over to the county treasurer, and they attach a copy of the attorney general's opinion to the report. The bookkeepers say: "The work required under the mortgage tax law was done by one of the clerks of the office who, at the time, was in receipt of a salary from the county. It does not appear whether they referred to Ulster or Tompkins county. County Clerk William C. DeWitt, they say, after receiving a copy of the attorney general's opinion, has been paying the amount allowed ($29.17 per month) to the county treasurer."

Lawyer's Advice Was Wrong—Of Course.

Taking up next the "Compensation of County Treasurer," the bookkeepers state that ex-Judge John G. Van Eten, in November, 1909, rendered an opinion to Albert H. Cook, then county treasurer, in regard to certain fees, and that Mr. Cook, relying on his attorney's opinion, retained fees on bank taxes, court and trust funds and state tax, from 1909 to 1913, amounting to $904.79 for fees on court and trust funds, and $282.88 for fees on bank taxes. In 1913 the county treasurer remitted to the state comptroller the full amount due the state on account of fees, and subsequently the state treasurer returned the fees amounting to $99.13, which was turned over to Mr. Cook. No entry of this transaction was made on the treasurer's books, and the amount reported to have been paid to Mr. Cook is the amount given to the bookkeepers by the clerk in the treasurer's office.

Since the decision of the supreme court in a recent Montgomery county case, say the bookkeepers, "some doubt exists as to the lawfulness of the right of the county treasurer in receipt of a salary to retain the fees on bank taxes. In the Montgomery county case, the court held the treasurer to be entitled to retain as his own the fees on bank taxes because the duties required of him under the bank law were imposed after his compensation had been fixed."

Notwithstanding the opinion of Judge Van Eten to Mr. Cook, which is attached to the report, the bookkeepers say that the same doubt does not exist as to the treasurer's right to fees on state taxes and court and trust funds.

The bookkeepers argue with Judge Van Eten for more than a page and conclude that "it is believed" that an Erie county case and a Steuben county case "clearly indicates that the Ulster county treasurer was not entitled to retain as his own fees on state taxes and court and trust funds."

Tell the Treasurer His Duties.

The next ten pages of the report are taken up by the bookkeepers in telling the county treasurer his duties, and from the quotations and citations these ten pages more nearly resemble a lawyer's brief than anything else.

The county law, which they quote, authorizes county treasurers "to expend county moneys only (1) for claims ordered paid by the board of supervisors; (2) or other lawful authority; (3) or for salaries of county officers; (4) or pursuant to the lawful direction of some court."

County treasurers, they say, have no difficulty in determining the payments which are properly classified under sub-division 1, and they classify a list of "other lawful authorities."

"Courts Are Wrong," Say the Bookkeepers.

"Payments made pursuant to the lawful direction of some court usually embrace payments of court and trust funds and certain court expenses," says the report. "It does not always follow that every order issued by a court is necessarily the lawful direction of the court, and it will be found below that some orders have been issued by the court and paid by the treasurer for which no statutory authority exists."

The bookkeepers state that they have arranged the payments made by the treasurer in groups in the order in which they appear in the treasurer's report to the board of supervisors, adopting this arrangement and numbering the groups "for the purpose of comment."

What Bookkeepers Mean by "Irregular" and "Illegal."

For six pages the bookkeepers discuss, with quotations and citations, the subjects of "The Power of Audit," "Verification of Accounts," "Determination of Legality of Claim," "Services of Public Officers," "Officers Expenses" and "Classification of Payments."

"In the comments which follow," they say, "the various payments and audits are described as:

1. Illegal payments.

2. Illegal audits.

3. Irregular audits."

"Illegal payments," when used herein, embraces payments made by the county treasurer or the supervisor intended for the poor without lawful authority, but the county if the proper procedure is followed. The term "illegal audits" is used to designate that class of expenditures not properly chargeable against the county under any circumstances. It applies, for the most part, to the audits of the board of supervisors, but in some few instances includes audits of the superintendent of the poor, orders of a judge and certificates of the clerk of the court. Those classed as "irregular audits" were found to have been audited without authority or by the wrong officer or board, but are proper county charges when the statutes are complied with."

There are 69 groups of accounts of expenditures by the county treasurer, which total $626,409.36.

"Illegal Payments" and "Illegal Audits."

Beginning with the court and jury fund, the bookkeepers say there were "illegal payments" of $1,213.09 and "illegal audits" of $908. The first criticism of the bookkeepers is to the method of paying court officers, jurors and witnesses. They say the treasurer, who issues warrants on the certificate of the county clerk, should keep some other record showing details, etc., besides the entry on the stub of his check book. Return of cancelled checks from the bank is made every month or six weeks, and between times the treasurer has "no complete and contemporaneous record of the transactions in this fund," and the balance can be determined only by reference to the books of the bank. The bookkeepers say he should not at any time be dependent upon the assistance or co-operation of the bank. These checks are countersigned by a rubber-stamp signature of the treasurer. "Apparently the rubber stamp remains in the treasurer's possession, but numbers of the certificates are stamped and delivered to the county clerk in addition to his requirements. Thus, it will be seen, that the county treasurer is delegating to the county clerk the expenditure of county funds and for the sake of saving some labor in the treasurer's office, has removed one of the safeguards which the legislature has seen fit to provide. Perhaps there is no danger in this practice while the county clerk is honest and trustworthy, but it is the beginning of an illegal practice which, if continued, might some day result in the loss of the county's funds."

The "illegal audits" amounting to $908, say the bookkeepers, are the amounts paid to Archibald McLaughlin, Jr., undersheriff, $282; Seth Jocelyn, $306; Luther Hoffman, $38; Harry McLaughlin, $254. These have been audited illegally, says the report for the reason that the names of the persons being paid by the county for time devoted to attendance on the court.

An item of $200 for quarterly payments to an attendant at the chambers of the supreme court justice was paid on certificates issued by the county clerk and is declared an "illegal payment" solely upon the ground that "the clerk was without authority to direct payment thereon."

The report says: "In justice to the clerk it should be noted that this practice is one of long standing and appears to have originated in a desire to obtain by a convenient, if not strictly legal method, the assistant allowed to the clerk by the provisions of section 42 of the county law."

"Meals and Lodging For Jurors" Illegal.

Characterized as "illegal payments" are the following items: Meals and lodging for jurors, $1,269.79.

Entertainment for jurors, $69.60.

Medical attendance for jurors, $7.00.

Bookkeepers Try to Roast Judge Seeger.

"The bills for the entertainment of jurors and for medical attendance," say the bookkeepers, "were paid by the treasurer upon the direction of the county judge of Orange county presiding at the trial of a criminal case in Ulster county. 'Entertainment for jurors' consisted of payment by the sheriff for tickets to moving picture shows and to a baseball game for the use of members of a jury which remained in charge of officers during the trial of a criminal case. 'Entertainment' and 'medical attendance' may have been considered by the judge to be proper expenses of a jury kept to court during the progress of a trial and which by section 42 of the county law are declared to be county charges." Nevertheless, say the bookkeepers, such payments were made when there was no authority in law until after audit by the board of supervisors.

Paid on Original Order Instead of Certified Copy.

The payment for meals and lodging for jurors, also paid on the order of Judge Seeger and the certificates of the county clerk, are illegal, says the report because they were not audited by the board of supervisors, one bill having been paid by Judge Seeger's order, which was dated February 20, 1913, (during the Frank M. Boyce, Jr. trial), "at a time when the judge was without authority to make such payments." Another bill was paid "upon what appears to be the original order made by the county judge and not upon a certified copy as prescribed by the statute."

Properly Audited But Yet "Illegal."

"Irregular audits" amounting to $270.55 and "illegal payments" of $719.94 are next given attention. The first lot of bills ($270.55) were paid to the State Charities Aid Association after audited by the board of supervisors. These bills were properly itemized but "were not verified in the form prescribed by statute."

Even the Industrial Home Bills are "Illegal."

The second lot of bills ($719.94) was presented by the Industrial Home. The warrants were signed by the chairman and clerk of the board of supervisors but "they bore on the face thereof evidence to the effect that they were not certificates of audit duly issued by the board and hence ought not to have been paid by the treasurer."

Work Was Done But Bills are "Illegal."

In the superintendent of the poor's accounts, the bookkeepers say there are "illegal payments" of $3,408.68, "irregular audits" of $337.71, "illegal audits" of $322.06. The "irregularly audited" bills were properly verified but not properly itemized. They consist principally of claims on account of labor in painting the buildings at the county poor farm. Other bills were irregular because not bearing the certificate of the state commission of prisons. The "illegal audits" include $153.86 for expenses "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors. The bookkeepers add: "The amount disbursed by the superintendent of the poor by check on the Huguenot National Bank is reported as having been illegally paid. Proof that such payments were made was shown by the production of cancelled checks drawn by the superintendent. Up to March 26, 1912, it appears these payments by Superintendent by check on the Huguenot National Bank were 'legal,' but an amendment to the Poor Law which took effect on that date made future payments 'illegal.'"

Postage Stamps and Express Charges "Illegal."

The county treasurer's payments of $115.64 for miscellaneous expenses of his office are pronounced "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors. They represent payments for postage stamps and expressage principally.

"Illegal" to Pay Assistant Clerks.

After quoting the resolution passed by the board authorizing the clerk to employ assistants and appropriating $1,000 for their services, the bookkeepers say the payment to assistant clerks was "illegal." "No question is raised as to the right of the board of supervisors to provide for assistants to the clerk of the board of supervisors," but there is no authority in law for the creation of the fund with which to pay them.

County Clerk's Postage Stamps are "Illegal."

The sum of $255.17 to reimburse the county clerk to reimburse him for expenditures for postage, expressage and other incidental expenses" is also pronounced "illegal" because not audited by the board of supervisors.

Copying Clerks Should Wait Year For Their Money.

The payments to clerks employed by the board of elections for copying names, which were audited by the committee on extra clerk hire for that board, and also payments for postage used by the board in sending out the enrollment blanks required by an amendment to the primary law, are declared "illegal" because not audited by the entire board of supervisors.

The Supply Committee is "Illegal."

The bookkeepers next reach the payments made by the supply committee, which committee and its payments are discussed by the bookkeepers with the announcement that they are "illegal." The payments made by the committee during the year amount to $8,217.27. The pages discussing this committee bristle with the word "illegal," but are not questioned. "In a former examination of the affairs of Ulster county," say the bookkeepers, "the question of the right of this committee to audit claims and order payment thereof was raised and a copy of the report of that examination has been in the custody of the treasurer since 1909." They say the payments have been made by the treasurer after ample notice of their "illegal" character, and the responsibility for payment rests on the treasurer. "All such payments are herein described as illegal," says the report.

"Because the Attorney General Says So."

The bookkeepers quote the section of the county law which authorizes the board of supervisors to appoint a board of county auditors, and submitted two questions to the attorney general.

The bookkeepers asked the attorney general if a board of supervisors could legally appoint its own members to a board of auditors. He replied "that a body authorized by law to make an appointment cannot appoint one of its own members, and that such an appointment is a nullity, and that it is contrary to the public policy of the law for an officer to use his official appointing powers to place himself in office."

Then they asked him if the county treasurer would be authorized to pay bills audited by county auditors so appointed, and he replied: "Your second question, it seems to me, is practically answered by the first for the reason that it is well settled that salary or compensation follows the true title to the office, and so far as any bills they might audit are concerned, if their appointment is a nullity, then, of course, their acts are of no force or effect."

Percentage to School Tax Collectors "Illegal."

The one per cent fees of collectors on returned school taxes audited by the board of supervisors are "illegal" because the law which formerly authorized them has been recently amended.

"Illegal" Headstones for Soldiers' Graves.

Because the board did not as a whole audit bills for headstones for soldiers' graves authorized by the law, amounting to $420, such payments are declared "illegal."

No Compensation When Committees Meet in Kingston.

The bookkeepers say next that bills amounting to $1,746.02 were not properly itemized and are "irregular audits." These bills, they say, "were principally those of county officials who had incurred expenses in the performance of their duties, and especially the bills rendered by members of the board of supervisors for committee work," and they say that bills amounting to $4,458.48 are "illegal audits," "for the reason that the services as may have been rendered by the said committee were so rendered at the city of Kingston and not five miles or more distant from the place where the sessions of the board are held." These items include the compensation, expenses and mileage of the committee on poor, committee on claims against the city of New York and committee on rights of way for state roads. The amounts paid to the committee on election accounts and supply committee are also declared "illegal."

The payment to the members of the insurance committee is not declared illegal, for the reason that they are in the custody of county buildings is intrusted to the board of supervisors. (With regard to practically every other committee, the bookkeepers say the board has no right to delegate its authority to committees.)

The bookkeepers again emphasize their belief that committees doing their work in Kingston city should not be paid, when they discuss the committee on claims of the county of Ulster against the city of New York. "What services could have been rendered the county by three members of the board attending the hearing of a difficult case before a referee does not readily appear," they say, but "Evidently necessary," for they allowed the members' bills for services. "In addition two members of the committee, Schoonmaker and McElhorne, considered themselves entitled to 'expense' and 'mileage.'" The third member of the committee lived in Kingston.

Say They Found Five Duplicate Charges.

The bookkeepers say they found five charges by supervisors for committee work on two committees that met on the same day. These amounts are: W. S. Hartshorn, $4; Thomas J. Leonard, $4.32; William H. Kolls, $4.32; Charles A. Schermerhorn, $4; Philip Schantz, $4.

Report Bills "Illegal" on General Principles.

The bill of County Superintendent of Highways James F. Loughran, say the bookkeepers, "on its face shows an attempt on the part of the claimant to comply with the requirements of his employment, requires his presence in various parts of the county and he is entitled to be reimbursed for his actual and necessary disbursements. Except as shown below the bill is itemized, giving dates of payment, names of traveling expenses, the expenditures are supported by sub-vouchers. The charges contained in this bill and which are not properly itemized amount to $160.38. They represent charges for trips to Albany and to various parts of the county and while apparently not excessive, nevertheless do not in strictness comply with the requirements of the statute and are reported herein as having been irregularly audited. This bill also contains a charge for $27 for interest on moneys borrowed to pay expenses incurred. That item is not a county charge and is reported herein as having been illegally audited."

For similar reasons the bookkeepers say the following bills are "illegal."

County Sealer George W. Dumond—$15.71, $9.46 of which was for expenses in attending the state convention of county sealers at Albany, and including organization fee.

County Attorney Arthur E. Rose—$189.59, because not itemized as the bookkeepers thought it should be.

Minard W. Myer—$150 for materials used on highway on a state road.

Charles J. Post—$50 for engraving resolutions adopted on the death of the late County Judge Cantine.

Christopher K. Loughran—$647 for services as clerk to the supply committee for two years, the bookkeepers considering the supply committee "illegal."

John W. Eckert—$60 for services to the committee on preparing the county's claim against the city of New York.

James F. Loughran—$849 for automobile rental in traveling throughout the county in the performance of his duties as county superintendent. He should have hired a machine from someone else and not hired his own machine.

C. K. Loughran—$135 for automobile hire for committee on securing rights of way for state roads. No sub-vouchers.

Stuyvesant Garage—$279 for automobile for committee on rights of way for state roads. No reason stated.

New York Telephone Company—$26.89 for duplicate charges.

Telephones, at Least, Meet Approval.

The bookkeepers admit that "As business is conducted today telephones are so necessary, that without them in public offices the public would be greatly inconvenienced," and admit that "As part of the office equipment of the county officials they are undoubtedly an expense the county is authorized to incur." They say they know of no statute which authorizes installation of telephones in private residences at the county's expense and it is "doubtful" as to the right of the board to pay for telephone service in offices of county officials at places other than in the county building and where the officials' private business is being conducted. It is clearly "illegal" to pay toll charges except where the message relates to public business.

Because of their location in private residences and in Supervisor Schantz's office, the bookkeepers say the bills and toll charges of Mr. Schantz, Former County Attorney Rose, Under Sheriff McLaughlin, and County Superintendent Loughran, amounting to $231.19, are "illegal."

The remainder of this abstract of the report of the comptroller's clerks will appear in the next issue of The Freeman.

ANALISTS MAY MAKE AGAINST WAR

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Paris, July 31.—The International Congress, representing 12,000 workers, may call an international strike of the mining and transportation industries in case of a European war, according to a statement made today.

The congress, which is bitterly opposed to war, feels that such a threat would cool the ardor of those who would start a strike of this kind. It is a tie up practically every railroad system on the continent and would force the closing of every industrial plant in a short time because of the lack of coal and steel.

Further than this, the tying up of the railroad system would mean starvation for millions living inland depend upon the railroads to bring them the largest portions of their food supplies.

When Germany and France were the verge of war two years ago, a similar threat on the part of the congress frightened the two governments into a peace agreement.

The congress meets here beginning August 8 and it is possible that the war situation became worse by that time, that the congress would issue an ultimatum to the powers "to stop war or we will call a strike within 48 hours."

The meeting of the congress originally was planned for August 23 in Vienna, but was shifted to the 8th and this city, so that the organization might take some means of halting the then pending Austro-Serbian war.

Child Bitten by a Dog.

Thursday evening last, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Pinkos Weiner, 38 Meadow street, was bitten in the arm by a dog said to be owned by a Polish family next door. Mr. Weiner caught the dog after it had bitten his son and tied it up in the yard. This morning he notified police headquarters and this afternoon Policeman White went to the Weiner house. Mr. Weiner refused to allow the officer to shoot the animal on his premises and paid Bill Tuttle, a well known colored man in that vicinity, ten cents to take the dog to the city hall. Bill started off with the animal leading it by a rope and had only gone a short distance when the dog refused to move any further and Bill picked him up and carried him. Whether Bill made the trip to the hall carrying the dog the full distance is not known. Mr. Weiner has had considerable misfortune lately. One of his sons is in the Kingston City Hospital in a serious condition from an operation brought on by the bad cat. He has too many green apples the other day.

Merchant Arrested.

Charles J. Weiss, dealer in plumbing supplies at 68 Broadway, was arrested this afternoon at the place of business by Policeman White on a warrant issued in Catskill charging Mr. Weiss with petty larceny. Mr. Weiss is well known in this city and is a member of the board of education.

Games Played or to be Played by the Home Teams.

The Knights of Columbus baseball team will play at Rhinecliff August 2. On August 9 they will cross bats with the fast Red Monogram team, making the third game of a five game series, each team having won one game.

The Red Monograms will play the High Falls team at McVey's field on Sunday afternoon, the game starting at 3 o'clock. The visitors have been playing a stiff game all season and should be able to give a good account of themselves with the locals. Scherer will probably peg for the Monograms.

The Manor A. C. will play the fast Centrals of this city a game of baseball on Downs Park Sunday afternoon. The two teams have played three games, the Manor A. C. team winning two of them and the Centrals one. If the Centrals should win this game the number of games won by each team will be tied and another one will be played to decide the winners.

The Leader baseball team will play the team representing the Gas and Electric Company on the Athletic Field this afternoon at five o'clock. Both teams have been in training for some time and the winner cannot be predicted. The batteries for the Leader team will be Voight, Leitz, Roach and Roe and for the Gas Company Zellmer and Newkirk. Nibsis DuBois will rest behind the bat, receiving the twisters from one of the many pitchers that the Leader has. No admission will be charged and all are welcome.

Why Wheat Prices Fell.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chicago, July 31.—The refusal of exporters at the seaboard to ship wheat unless cash accompanied the consignment resulted in a break in prices on the board of trade today. Closing prices were in the neighborhood of 9 cents lower than yesterday's close. The Armour interests did much to restore confidence by offering to assist any firm which cared to avoid excessive margin calls. Corn and oats were also weakened by the break in wheat.

Nish, Serbia, July 31.—Serbian troops have repulsed the invading Austrians. Dispatches from Semendria to military headquarters here say that the Austro-Hungarian troops have failed to force the pass which would give access to the Morava valley, and thus open a direct road to Nish.

Desperate fighting is going on at the pass. Serbian artillery mounted on the hills has inflicted terrific losses on the attacking forces.

Lieut. Popovitch, who distinguished himself in the war with Turkey, was among the first Serbians killed in the battle near Semendria.

Desperate fighting is going on today with heavy losses on both sides. Additional Austrian troops have come up to reinforce the regiments storming the Serbian intrenchments about the pass.

CULLING THE POULTRY FLOCK IN SUMMER

Single Comb Partridge Cock in China.

(By PROF. J. G. HALPIN, Wisconsin Agricultural College.)
The poultry flock should be culled during summer, so as to take advantage of the comparatively good prices that prevail then. Hens over two or three years old, the small hens, the badly shaped ones, such as those with crow heads or crooked breasts, overfat hens, and hens known to be poor layers, should be sold.

Not only will the price be lower later in the season, but the presence of these undesirable hens will reduce the efficiency of the entire flock. Thus, after the flock has been culled, all the remaining hens should be given bands or otherwise marked so that they may later be distinguished from the pullets.

BROODING THE CHICKS

GOOD START IN LIFE IS MORE THAN HALF THE BATTLE.

From Hatching Time Until Feathered and Ready for Colony is Most Important and Vital Period—Laying the Foundation.

(By J. W. KELLAR, Copyright, 1914.)
The brooding period embraces that portion of a chick's life from the time it is hatched until it is feathered and ready for the colony house and is a most important and vital period, for then is laid the foundation of the future.

There are two methods of brooding—the natural, in which the hen supplies the warmth and care, and the artificial, in which the brooder is used. In the natural brooding that is necessary is a comfortable coop, not too warm, roomy and free from drafts, kept clean and sprayed liberally with a good liquid lice killer, or better still, poultry disinfectant. Then, given proper feed, the hen will do the rest.

Artificial brooders have two parts—a hover which is warmed and supplies the heat to the chicks, and a nursery or exercising room. In choosing a brooder select one that is well built, easily cleaned and in which the heat is deflected downward on the chick's back. Avoid bottom heat, which causes leg troubles. Buy the brooder plenty large and do not crowd the chicks. Keep it sweet and clean and cover the floor with sand or fine chopped alfalfa or clover.

"I believe in fewer laws and better ones. More vetoes and fewer apologies. Less legislation and more business. Fewer investigations and more things accomplished. The repeal of existing useless and ineffective laws passed by the legislature without due study. Less pursuit of alibed vice, and more practice of real virtue. Construction, not destruction."

"These few propositions will go far to give the state a sound, normal administration, and the people actual benefit. Corruption can be eliminated more effectively by executive insistence and quiet attention than by noisy promise. It is time for more action and less rhetorical pretense."

"To deceive the people by false phrase and mock them by pretended virtue is moral treason. It is time for men who pretend to speak for the people while talking for themselves, to act more for the people and think less of themselves."

"The day of political chicanery is passing and I hope claptrap will soon cease to be a party or an individual asset."

"The era of common sense, common honesty and restoration of the public to a normal state of mind is approaching."

The foregoing sentiment applies to advertising and business as well as politics. When we say that some very unusual price reductions on various household articles will be found in our Big August Sale, soon to be launched, you may depend upon that statement being borne out by truth and sincerity. MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

Ty Cobb, of butcher soaking fame, seems to be headed in the general direction of his other years in fast company—the batting leadership of the American League.

Tyrus isn't slamming them out with the frequency of 1911-12-13 but, "there's a reason," the reason being that he doesn't have to. No one in the league just now shows any signs of finishing the year with .400 or anywhere near that total, so why should Ty nudge exert himself?

Tyrus has a habit of never trying to make a runaway race of the batting business. To lead and to let others follow, close enough to make things a bit interesting—that's Ty's method.

Before Josephus Jackson busted into the clubbing contest in the American League, Ty was content to club 'em out around .370, which was quite enough to give him the leadership. But, Josephus, after really getting under way, soaked the leather for .408 or so. And Ty—oh, he went .420. That was enough to beat Josephus in a convincing fashion. Had Jo gone to .500 it's quite likely that Ty would have taken notice of Joe's bet and raised his average to about .515 or .518.

Joe gave Ty another .400 battle and once again Ty was out—by just enough to make the victory decisive. Last year Ty batted only .390 or so. But it was enough, because Jackson dropped to .370.

This year Ty got away to a bad start, but in the past eight weeks, he has been hitting 'em again—just enough to get back to his old place at the top. His lead isn't large, but that isn't Ty's idea of a batting battle. He likes to keep competition close—and then breeze in under the October wire ahead by a fairly noticeable margin.

Ty has led the league seven years in a row. And this looks like number eight.

The National League is tooting George Burns, of the Giants, as an outfielder who ranks with the great American League quartet—Cobb, Jackson, Speaker and Milan. Burns is not as spectacular as the American League players, but his averages this year show him to be considerable of an all-around outfielder.

Burns is batting well over .300 and his hitting is extremely timely. He seldom has failed to deliver in a pinch. Burns is a better thrower than Cobb or Jackson, is pulling as many wonderful fielding stunts as the great Speaker, is a whirlwind on bases, and best of all, seems to be without nerves and absolutely lacking in the temperamental stuff that detracts so much from the usefulness of stars.

Can Honus Wagner make it 18 years over the .300 mark? This is the question that agitates fandom just now almost as much as the one—who will participate in the world's series?

The fans all over the country are watching the game effort of the veteran to again reach .300 and of sticking there when he does. He's started off at a fine clip and held well over .300 early in the season, but when the Pirates slumped, his batting did likewise. He went down to a mark around .250 before the skidding ceased. Since then he has boosted his mark to around .280—a few jumps away from .300.

Honus is playing his 18th year in fast company. In the other 17 years he never has failed to bat .300 or over—a record without parallel in baseball history.

A Los Angeles dispatch tells us that a fellow named Jim Jeffries said:

"If Jess Willard is matched to meet Jack Johnson I would like to train Jess. I feel that if properly trained, Jess can whip the negro." The name of Jeffries sounds familiar, but we just can't seem to place it at this moment.

Chris Mathewson of the Giants, is a sad example of what golf will do to an otherwise perfectly Christian-like gent.

Matty, as most everyone knows, does not play ball on Sunday. Such an act would conflict with his religious scruples. He made it a condition when he joined the Giants that he never was to participate in a Sunday game.

Hearing of Matty's stand, and admiring it, a St. Louis clergyman called at the Giants' hotel to congratulate Matty when the Giants were in the Mound City recently. It was on Sunday.

"Mr. Mathewson is out, sir," the hotel clerk told the minister.

"Could you tell me, please, where I can find him?" asked the clergyman.

"Yep, he's out playing golf—his second round today," was the reply.

Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight, is an enigma to the fight fans. Pitted against a dub scrapper, Joe shows up like a world beater. He hits with terrific power, uses wonderful ring generalship, carries an almost invulnerable defense and is handy and cool at every stage of the fight.

But Joe, again—a champ or near

NEWBURGH WANTS BRIDGE.

Petition for Sleightsburgh Bridge Receives Many Signers.

Papers petitioning the state highway department to complete the construction of the state highway known as Route 3 by building a bridge over the Rondout creek at Sleightsburgh to this city are being widely circulated in Newburgh by members of the automobile club of that city. The work is being done at the request of the Ulster County Automobile Club and Orange county residents are responding nobly. The petition is as follows:

"The undersigned, residents of the city of Newburgh and vicinity, members of the Chamber of Commerce, owners of automobiles and others are in favor of furthering the efforts made by the inhabitants of the city of Kingston, the towns of Esopus, Lloyd and Marlborough and all of us living on or contiguous to the state highway known as Route 3, do hereby endorse every effort made by them and add our names in support of this appeal, earnestly desiring that said road, known as the missing link extending from the north line of the town of Lloyd to the southerly terminus of the town of Esopus be constructed. Also that the bridge mentioned in section 120 of chapter 157, laws of 1912, be constructed so that a continuous route will result without delay to vehicles of all descriptions. We therefore appeal to you to use every endeavor to enforce the law providing for said state highway and bridge."

HANSON FAMILY TROUBLES.

Former Kingston Man's Actress Wife Makes Things Very Lively.

Walter L. Hanson, a former employee of the Allen-Kingston Automobile Company when its plant was located in this city, again figures in the limelight. Now his wife is suing his mother, Mrs. Aimee Lathrop Hanson, for $100,000 for alienation of her husband's affections. After leaving Kingston Hanson cut a wide swath in New York and married Henrietta Rautti, a vaudeville actress. Then his mother had him declared incompetent from excessive drinking and was appointed a committee of his person and estate. Hanson inherited $50,000 from the estate of his father. The suit for alienation is the latest step in the affair although friends have been contending for some time that the parties were reconciled. Mrs. Hanson, mother of Walter, is a niece of the late Mrs. Leland Stanford of California.

Lower Broadway is Clean.

Yesterday an item regarding dirt on lower Broadway appeared in The Freeman. When the paragraph was written conditions were as described, but before the paper was in the hands of readers the street sweeper had remembered about lower Broadway and given it the usual cleaning.

Frederick Wright of Spring Glen, who has been employed at Bellefonte's on the old Beebe place, near Hurleyville, had his leg broken last Friday. He had been out riding with a load of people and stepped out of the wagon backwards. Being deaf he did not hear the honk of an approaching automobile driven by M. Horowitz of Neversing, which struck him.
